Overview

The Monterey Jazz Festival Summer Jazz Camp is an intensive program for students to learn and develop knowledge and proficiency in jazz skills, with classes including big bands, small ensembles, vocal performance and vocal jazz mentoring, instrumental master classes, and daily workshops on current and historical jazz subjects. The camp also features all-inclusive Master Sessions with professional jazz artists and educators, as well as Monterey Jazz Festival's Artists-In-Residence.

The camp's roster of instructors features many of the finest and experienced jazz educators in the country. Present faculty include saxophonists, Paul Contos and Kasey Knudsen, trumpeters Michael Galisatus and Kyle Athayde, trombonist Jeannie Geiger, pianists Eddie Mendenhall, guitarist Pat Kelley, bassist Katie Thiroux, drummer Matt Witek, and vocalist Gaw Vang Williams. Committed to training the next generation of teachers, the camp also invites talented young instructors or alumni of the Festival's Jazz Education Programs to mentor younger students. The Summer Jazz Camp also provides an opportunity for tomorrow's jazz educators to teach today's students as interns.

Scholarships and subsidies are provided by Monterey Jazz Festival for many students. Included at camp is an evening concert that is free and open to the public.

History

Monterey Jazz Festival's Education Program has sponsored Summer Jazz Camp since the late 1980s. In partnership with another local music education program, jazz camp started at Stevenson School for its first few years. Moving on its own to various campus locations on the Monterey Peninsula and Carmel, jazz camp found a home at the music facilities at Monterey Peninsula College through much of the first decade of the 2000s and on to 2015. In 2016, Summer Jazz Camp returned to its original home at Stevenson School, with a residency option to accommodate students from anywhere in the U.S., as well as the many middle and high school students within Monterey County that MJF serves annually throughout the year.
